I AM

I sit in the castles of business and at the hearthstones of many homes, mighty in my power to serve.

Through me is the power to make people talk with intelligence concerning their communities.

With extended hand I guide the wearied traveler, and to others shorten the distances between destinations.

In me abides the essence of democracy, as side by side is found all nationalities, rich and poor alike.

With uncanny certainty I unite long-lost friends and make glad the missing heirs.

Through me are protected the law-abiding by tracing the criminal to his hiding place.

Through me, in the friendliest way, new trade channels are opened.

I am the key that unlocks the gate to what your community is, for all who would pass its portals.

I Am Your City Directory

The Hartford Suburban Directory

In presenting this Edition of the Hartford Suburban Directory, we pay our tribute to those who by diligent effiort for over three generations have maintained an indispensable service without interruption.

This First issue with 191,400 names, covering a population of 133,425 (Federal Census 1950) and an area of over 220.04 square miles.

For over a century this unbroken line of city directories has mirrored the city in each step of its progress and recorded the activities of its citizens so that many names that are making Hartford Suburban what it is today can be traced back to ancestors who were equally as important in their time.

A complete file of directories covering this period is indispensable to those who enjoy tracing those who laid the foundations for existing families. Nothing can equal city directories for this purpose when they are built solely for rendering each year as complete and accurate service as possible and, if kept, will add one more annual record of what Hartford Suburban is at this period; and it is with this objective that this book is presented with these outstanding features.

Standardization

This book, basically, has been made to conform to standardization of city directories, as suggested by the Department of Commerce in Washington and adopted by the Association of North American Directory Publishers, with the additional features of a more comprehensive governmental and civic department together with half-tone photographs of our leading citizens. This is a valuable feature of identification and in future years will perpetuate the memory of those who are making this community what it is today.

Governmental and Civic Directory

As the capital city, this department will give more general information than is usually found in city directories. Federal, State, County and Municipal institutions are represented by personnel.

Buyer's Directory

Likened to the development of our modern cities, the advertisements in this department have been zoned or classified. This is the result of standardization for simplification of use.

It reflects the professional, industrial and commercial activities in an orderly manner. Now with its simplification of use, so complete and diversified in its service it will open local channels for distribution and trade, and as a whole, visualizes as no other medium, the sturdy foundation upon which rests the Hartford Suburban of today.

Alphabetical Directory

Names and occupations of those over eighteen years of age; also, many of those who are identified with business activities and reside elsewhere. When married, wife's name appears in parentheses.

Names and locations of firms, corporations and institutions.

Names appearing in large display type are paid-for listings.

This department is the foundation for all directory references, from which only additional information can be secured in other sections.

Numerical Directory

The additional avenues for service as incorporated will be continued and, as one becomes familiar with its many uses, it will become indispensable with one's activities. It is the microscope that tells "who is who" in any given area and how they can be located even to the distance from any given street corner.

This department has a neighborly friendliness and even its color (pink), gives it added warmth. Try it on your neighborhood.

Classified Directory

Within this increased area, so great diversification may be found, that one almost feels as if it were self-sustaining. To illustrate: You can find 257 farmers raising tobacco, dairy products, vegetables, poultry, fruit, etc. As an outlet for these products there are listed 158 grocers and meat markets, 24 milk dealers, 55 drug stores, 31 confectionery stores, 5 cigar stores and numerous other distributing centers. For these outlets there are 64,250 householders as found in the numerical section. Thus completing the cycle of creating and consuming.

Clear through this classified department you can trace these same channels of supply and demand for almost every business activity, which, when intelligently applied, forges a chain of inter-community activities, that strengthens by increased knowledge and recognition of every local source of supply.

Directory Library

A Free Service For All

We have at The Business Branch of the Hartford Public Library at 500 Main Street, a library of city directories, covering 1356 cities, towns and communities throughout the United States and Canada.

What your city directory can do for you locally, a directory library can do for you nationally.

A GREAT CITY DIRECTORY ORGANIZATION SERVING

3,651,320 People in the most densely populated area in America

Annually, with a trained organization within these five states, serving one hundred and forty-one communities, each street and building is thoroughly canvassed for new names, changes and verification of prior information, after which by trained investigators, sections are again recanvassed to keep our name takers keyed up to a high degree of accuracy.

Through the process of sorting, compilation and still greater refining for accuracy, each name is handled twelve times as it becomes a part of the five departments when combined and printed into city directories, renders a service unsurpassed for those who know that without knowledge, activities become wasteful, confused and subject to duplication.

East Hartford History

East Hartford's early history and subsequent growth is closely allied with the City of Hartford. Following the settlement of Hartford in 1635 by Thomas Hooker and his band from the Massachusetts Bay Colony, a number of the settlers crossed the Great River from Hartford to the east shore where the meadow lands promised better opportunities for cultivation.

The first house is believed to have been built by John Crow in 1639 in the vicinity of the Hockanum River, east of Pitkin Street. in 1654, William Goodwin built a saw mill on the Hockanum River to cut lumber for homes. Main Street was laid out in 1670. A public ferry was established between Hartford and East Hartford in 1681 and the Hockanum River was first bridged in 1700.

Once the home of the Podunk Indians, East Hartford in 1774 had a census of 2,000 persons. William and George Pitkin established the first powder mill in Connecticut and possibly the country when they set up a small shop on the Hockanum River in 1775. The same year, Watson and Ledyard built a paper mill from which came the writing paper for the Continental Army. The Hockanum River also supplied power for grist mills.

General Rochambeau marched 5,000 French soldiers along Silver Lane in the summer 1781 and encamped in East Hartford for three days before crossing the Connecticut River and again encamped in town as the army returned from the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

In 1783, the same year the General Assembly, convening in New Haven, granted East Hartford a charter, William and Elisha Pitkin began making glass and later made snuff. The land area east of the river was further diminished in 1823 when the Town of Manchester was formed from a portion of then East Hartford. At that time, East Hartford had a woolen mill, two glass works, eight powder mills, a hat factory, several grist and saw mills and a tannery along with carding shops and several small businesses.

The first bridge between Hartford and East Hartford was built in 1810. It was partially destroyed by ice in 1818 and was rebuilt the same year. It stood for 77 years and on May 17, 1895, burned out completely.

A steel bridge was then built in 1896 and the present Bulkeley Bridge was built in 1908. The Charter Oak Bridge was completed in 1942, The Founders Bridge in 1959.

East Hartford had its first electric lights in stores in 1883 and by 1888 had 15 telephones. The trolley line between Glastonbury and East Hartford was built in 1895 and its course still exists today. Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, the forerunner of United Aircraft Corporation and the town's principal taxpayer, moved to East Hartford from Hartford in 1929, and the famous Fuller Brush Company moved from Hartford to East Hartford in 1959.

WEST HARTFORD HISTORY

Not long after the Thomas Hooker party settled Hartford in 1636, the settlement of the river city's west division was undertaken. The area was laid out in 1672, its proprietors named, five years later, and in 1679 one Stephen Hosmer, grist mill owner, became the first settler, locating on the bank of Trout Brook at North Main Street.

In 1711 the settlers from Hartford, Windsor, Hadley, and Northampton who had located in the West Division, were granted by the General Assembly the right to establish a church, and in 1713, 29 members launched the congregation which is now the First Church of Christ in West Hartford.

Henceforward until after the Revolutionary War the history of the Town and the First Ecclesiastical Society are substantially the same, for the Society built and maintained schools and thus dominated education as well as religion.

In the autumn of 1736 the townspeople of the West Division of Hartford voted to open a public school for the year under supervision of the Ecclesiastical Society Committee with the provision for a master to teach during the winter and a dame to teach the younger children in the summer. In 1745 three new school houses were built. In 1823 the management of the public schools was placed under the control of the Second School Society of Hartford. After 1855 this society went out of existence and the local school districts began to take over the operations of the School Society. In 1852 the first modern school building was built. In 1872 the first public high school opened with 38 students. By 1884 the unfavorable conditions which existed in the district management of the grammar schools brought about a proposal for a consolidated plan for management of the schools which went into effect in 1885. This plan placed control of the schools in the hands of the Town Committee. This committee improvised a calendar which provided uniform terms, gradation of the scholars, equalization of teachers' salaries, and in 1897 it employed the first permanent supervisor of schools.

Because West Hartford is one of the fastest growing cities in Connecticut the increased school population has made it necessary to build many new schools, as well as to acquire school sites for future buildings.

LOUISE DUFFY SCHOOL

Rose Terry Cooke, a leading New England short story writer born in 1829 and Noah Webster, born in 1758, whose fame as a lexicographer became world wide and lasting, were perhaps the most distinguished West Division natives. Bulk of the townspeople lived the lives of innumerable agricultural communities in New England. The ferment of independence, which brought the American Revolution, bred in these West Division farmers a desire to be a separate, self-governing township. First move for political separation from Hartford began in 1792 and continued until realized in 1854. At this time West Hartford had "a population of more than 1200 persons and taxable property of more than $20,000 in value."

From then until the close of World War I, West Hartford was governed by town meeting and elected boards of selectmen. In 1921, the first town manager government in the State was set up, and the community is now governed by a town manager, town council, and various boards and commissions, composed of citizens who serve for the most part without pay. But for the fact that the city's development is sound and solid, the rapid growth would characterize it as a "Boom Town." In 1900 West Hartford had a population of 3,186. Today it is estimated as approximately 63,000. West Hartford is notable as a residential town for Hartford businessmen. Development of the industrial and business facilities of the town has been closely correlated with its population expansion. West Hartford has one of the highest per capita income rating in the United States, and correspondingly the highest per capita income tax.

Unusual features in the town are the two landscaped playgrounds, far more useful than the usual playground, since they are more adapted to adults and offer a greater variety of play sources for children. There are four golf courses in the town, two public and two private.

Among the early houses and buildings of the town which still stand are the rectory of St. James Episcopal Church built in 1758 and still retains its original general features and the Sarah Whitman Hooker house, which has been restored by West Hartford's Sarah Whitman Hooker Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

West Hartford's area is nearly 14,000 acres, a little larger than the area of Hartford nearby. Most of this land lies in beautiful ridges and valleys, reaching westward to Talcott Mountain, where some of the finest, most extensive views of the Connecticut Valley are seen.

The demand for homes in West Hartford has increased steadily during the past ten years, and is continuing. A great variety of homes have been built here—moderate priced small homes, large homes with beautifully landscaped grounds, and several sizeable estates. Many new carefully laid out and well planned developments have been undertaken in the past few years, and the building codes of the Town have been worked out to provide attractive, liveable homes in every price range.

KINGSWOOD SCHOOL

Among the fine private schools in the community are the well-known American School for the Deaf on North Main Street, where some of the best work in the country is being done to train students handicapped by deafness. The Kingswood School for boys, Mt. St. Joseph's Academy for Girls, the Oxford School for girls, the Robinson School for Boys, St. Thomas's School, the Junior School are all well attended private schools. St. Joseph College for women has won a fine name among advanced educational institutions, and Hartford College is also very well known and regarded. West Hartford has a number of nursery schools.

Saint Joseph College, located on a spacious 80 acre campus on upper Asylum Avenue in West Hartford, is a four year liberal arts college devoted to the higher education of women.

In 1925 the Sisters of Mercy of Hartford began preparations to extend to college level the contribution the Order had made to Connecticut education for nearly a century. With the approval of the Most Reverend John J. Nilan, D.D., then Bishop of Hartford, the Sisters obtained a College Charter from the Connecticut State Legislature which granted powers to confer degrees.

In 1932 a junior college for women was opened at Mount Saint Joseph, Hamilton Heights. Within two years the College had formulated its four year liberal arts program, and in 1935, with the approbation of the Most Reverend Maurice McAuliffe, D.D., the Sisters obtained extensive acreage on Asylum Avenue and erected two large Georgian-Colonial Buildings. Saint Joseph College opened its doors the following year on its present campus.

Since that date the College has expanded both in enrollment and facilities. The student body has grown from a pioneering group of 63 to more than 700 undergraduate students; the faculty from its original 15 to 62 religious and lay teachers.

With the addition of two dormitory buildings in 1955, Rosary and McAuley Halls, the College now has four of its eleven projected buildings. A new library building was completed in 1960 which will house 100,000 volumes, accommodate 200 readers at a time, and provide ample space for an art gallery, faculty studies and seminar space. Three additional buildings, a student union, faculty residence, and student dormitory, will be built in the near future, financed by a Federal Government loan granted under the provisions of the 1959 Housing Act.

Saint Joseph College has received full approval and accreditation from the Connecticut State Board of Education, the Board of Regents of New York, and the New England Association of American Colleges, the American Council on Education, and the National Catholic Education Association.

In its first quarter century, Saint Joseph College has welcomed students from every section of Connecticut, many states of the Union, and 25 foreign countries. The alumnae now numbers nearly 3,000.

The undergraduate division offers degree programs in the liberal arts and sciences, economics and business, home economics, and preparation for teaching and medicine. Students receive first hand training in good citizenship and government from membership or participation in their own Student Government Association, in the Connecticut Intercollegiate Legislature, the National Federation of Catholic College Students, The National Student Association, and in social work centers such as Saint Benedict's, Union and Mitchell House settlements, and in volunteer service with handicapped and mentally retarded children.

Beginning with the 1959 summer session, Saint Joseph College opened a year-round Graduate Study Program for the higher education of teachers, both men and women. The program aims to produce "scholar teachers" and is open to (1) In-service teachers, (2) liberal arts graduates aspiring to teach, and (3) those who desire to profit by advance study in a particular field. Five fields of study are offered.

Saint Joseph College, through its graduate and undergraduate programs, offers every student opportunity for growth and development, while maintaining high standards of education. Nicely appointed buildings, adequate social and religious life, music and dramatic programs, lectures, valuable contacts with students of other colleges, all combine to provide an educational experience as pleasant as it is fruitful.

University of Connecticut Law School now located on Asylum Avenue just west of St.Joseph's College. University of Connecticut Undergraduate Branch, Insurance School and School of Social Work to be located here also.

West Hartford has many churches of all religions and denominations. Many of these are excellent examples of New England church architecture, with fine classic facades, and slender spires. Some years ago, a movement was undertaken to have the facades of the West Hartford churches lighted, and many of these buildings now are lighted each night at dusk.

The Town has an excellent library of some 200,000 volumes. The Main building on South Main Street is part of the municipal group of buildings there, and was opened in 1938. It has a spacious and well furnished reading room, and a reference room of several thousands of important works. There is a branch Library in the Elmwood section, well stocked, and through which arrangements can be made for any of the books in the Main Branch. Also a new branch at Bishop's Corner to be opened shortly. The Library makes a special effort to participate in the civic and business life of the community—recently arrangements were made for continuing exhibits of the industrial activities of West Hartford and other activities of general interest.

West Hartford has its own newspaper—the "West Hartford News"—a weekly which is issued on Thursdays, and which circulates to more than 5,000 homes and businesses. In the past few years, this publication has been transformed from a "shopping news" to a full fledged newspaper and has become an important influence in the community.

West Hartford's retail section consists of four main locations—the Center, along Farmington Avenue, Crossroads Plaza, Bishop's Corner, Park Road, Corbin's Corner, and the Elmwood section. Fine shops are to be found in all of these, and there are several other smaller retail communities offering excellent shopping facilities to their neighborhoods.

BISHOP'S CORNER

The route of the New Haven Railroad through the south easterly section of West Hartford has located industries in that section. Some of the country's best known industries are quartered in West Hartford, among them the Abbott Ball Company, the Bush Manufacturing Company, the Bennet Metal Treating Company, Carling Electric Co., the General Cigar Company, the Har-Conn Chrome Company, the Hartford Steel Ball Company, the Hartford Heat Treating Company, the Holo-Krome Screw Corporation, the Jacobs Manufacturing Company, Pratt & Whitney Co., Inc., Royal Typewriter Company, Spencer Turbine Company, United Tool &

PRATT & WHITNEY CO., INC.

Die Company, the Walton Company, the Whitlock Manufacturing Company, The Wiremold Company, H. P. Townsend Mfg. Co., Connecticut Manifold Forms, Inc., and Viking Baking Co. The variety of the industrial products of West Hartford covers a very wide range—precision gauges, machine tools, electrical raceways and pre-wired outlets, tap and pipe extractors, set screws, typewriter ribbons and carbons, dies and jigs, refrigeration and heat transfer equipment, turbines and vacuum systems, chucks, plastic sheets and rods and molding materials, steel balls for bearings, tobacco products, steel and copper pipe and many others.

Recreational activities are abundantly provided for in West Hartford, and the Town has a full time Recreational Director. On Fern Street are conveniently located swimming and wading pools, and also tennis courts, with buildings for dressing. There is a swimming pool and clubhouse at the Beachland Park on South Quaker Lane, and municipal golf courses, picnic areas and groves at Buena Vista. Cornerstone Club, a year round swimming pool is located at Buena Vista. Rockledge Country Club, an 18-hole championship golf course is now owned and operated by the Town. Kennedy Memorial Park on Oakwood Avenue, a new 18-acre neighborhood park has swimming and wading pools. Sterling Athletic Field is well equipped for baseball and football and other sports, and the athletic fields of the high schools are scenes of constant activity.

Wethersfield History

Indian name - Pyquaug - Settled 1633-4

ORIGINAL OLD WETHERSFIELD

Every ancient history and school text book pronounces "Wethersfield ye most auncient town for the valley," verified by extensive research findings adopted by the town Friday, June 27, 1930, and expressed as "the first permanent Settlement in Connecticut." Wethersfield with Windsor and SayeBrooke, 1635, Agawam and Hartford, 1636, became the nucleus of the Connecticut colony.

The area of Wethersfield was scouted by John Oldham (a town builder), 1633, following migratory Indian trails from the sea. In the spring of 1634 he brought a company from Watertown, Mass. During 1635, groups came overland and around by water. Church controversies, increasing population and the desire to conquor the wilderness for individual peace and contentment brought about continued migration into the ever widening "Great West." Major groups founded Mill-forde in 1639, Stam-forde in 1641, Bran-forde in 1643, Hadley in 1659, Litchfield, Pittsfield, several towns in the salt region and in the "Connecticut Gore" of New York, and settlements in the New Connecticut of Vermont in 1724. In Wethersfield, April 11, 1640, was held the first Public Election by American people, in defiance to the Royal Courts of the Crown, a demonstration of American liberty and independence 135 years before its declaration at Philadelphia, Pa.

George Washington must have had a high regard for Wethersfield for he spent a longer period of time here than any other place in Connecticut. During his four visits to this town he slept here six nights in all; the first time, in the Silas Deane house on the night of June 29, 1775, when on his way to assume command of the Continental Army at Cambridge, and then the five nights of May 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 1781 at the Webb house, during the celebrated Yorktown Conference.

If Washington could return to Wethersfield today, he would recognize many of the landmarks which are still here.

The Webb house where he lodged one hundred and seventy years ago remains practically the same, even to the paper on the wall of the room in which he slept. At that time the house was painted red, and had no front porch.

WEBB HOUSE

The Ancient Burying Ground, which was then one hundred and fifty years old, remains unchanged, and the new Meeting House where he attended divine service on Sunday, May 20, 1781, looks the same, even to the Christopher Wrenn spire, although the south porch has since been added. It was this Meeting House of which the Tory minister, Rev. Samuel Peters wrote, "It is much larger than Solomon's Temple, and the people are much more gay than polite." Washington received divine inspiration from the Rev. John Marsh, who was pastor of the church.

The Simeon Belden house at 251 Main Street, built in 1767 a few rods north of the Webb house, would look familiar, as would the Rev. James Lockwood house at 290 Main Street, built the same year, both houses being only fourteen years old at the time of Washington's visit to the Webb house.

At 28 Marsh Street stands the Captain Gershom Nott house, built in 1760. It was Captain Gershom's daughter, Mehitable, who married Joseph Webb, Sr. and became the mother of Joseph Webb, Jr., and Samuel Blatchley Webb. After the death of Joseph Webb, Sr., she married Silas Deane and lived in the house at 203 Main Street, built in 1766.

Next east of the Captain Gershom Nott house stands the Peter Burnham house which formerly stood just east of the Meeting House. This house was built in 1755, the year of the launching of Washington's military career and Braddock's defeat.

Washington might be surprised at the concrete sidewalks instead of gravel walks, and hard-surfaced streets in place of dust and mud; and the network of wires strung aloft on poles would intrigue him, as would the parallel lines of iron rails in the middle of the street reminiscent of a mode of transportation which the present generation has seen come and go.

Washington would recognize the Masonic Temple with its symbol of the Square and Compass for he had been a member of Fredericksburg Lodge of Masons for thirty years at the time of the conference in Wethersfield.

In the spring of 1781 a dismal future confronted the embattled colonists who were contesting the most powerful nation on earth. Desertions were numerous, enlistments few, food and supplies scarce, and Continental currency practically worthless. One-third of the population was loyal to the cause of Freedom, one-third, neutral, and one-third, Tories. The latter were loyal to the Crown, and, after six years of intermittent warfare, only two major battles—Saratoga and Princeton—had been won by the Colonists. Tryon had raided Danbury and destroyed a large quantity of supplies, and Arnold had turned traitor, endeavoring to surrender West Point to the Crown. Naturally the people were discouraged.

Following the surrender of Burgoyne on October 17, 1777, France had signed a treaty of alliance with the new government in February 1778. Largely through the instrumentality of Silas Deane, a Wethersfield man, France promised to supply men and materials and to send over troops under the leadership of Lafayette, DeKalb and Steuben.

At this time a French fleet of twelve war vessels and thirty-six transports lay in Narragansett Bay, loaded with four regiments of French troops—some 3,000 or 4,000 soldiers and supplies—blockaded by the British fleet under Admiral Arbuthnot. The French fleet was in command of Admiral Count de Barras and the army, in command of General Count de Rochambeau. Encamped on Lebanon Green was the Duc de Lauzun with his Legion of Horse.

It was the attempt to coordinate these forces with the American Army that resulted in the Webb House Conference. Washington was at New Windsor on the Hudson and Rochambeau, at Newport, some two hundred miles apart, and the Webb House was about half way between the two places. As the legislature was in session in Hartford, accommodations were scarce there. Secrecy and avoidance of publicity concerning the proposed conference were necessary, resuting in the choice of Wethersfield for the conference.

Wethersfield at that time was one of the most prosperous towns in Connecticut. Business was thriving, and Joseph Webb became wealthy. Washington stated in 1789 that 20 vessels sailed out of Middletown and 22 from Wethersfield to foreign ports. In 1752 Joseph Webb, at the age of 25, built the beautiful mansion in which the Conference was held on three and a quarter acres of land which he had purchased from Major Samuel Wolcott, 2nd, for 1800 pounds. The property consisted of a "dwelling house, barn, shop and all other buildings standing thereon." Tradition says that the present ell part of this house is the original Wolcott house, built in 1678.

The Connecticut Society of the Colonial Dames of America purchased the property November 19, 1919, and now maintains it as a headquarters and museum. The house is furnished in the manner of a gentleman's home of the period in which it was built, although most of the original furniture was moved to the Kent-Delord House in Plattsburg, New York, years ago.

The Webb House Conference has been called the most important conference connected with the Revolutionary War and the house is considered one of the three most famous buildings associated with that war.

The town is upon through trunk highways. The Silas Deane Highway, The Wilbur Cross Highway and Interstate 91, which will probably open for traffic through Wethersfield sometime during the fall of 1963. Wethersfield has established an Historic District which encompasses most of the Old Town lying east of the Silas Deane Highway. The William H. Putnam Bridge, linking the Town of Wethersfield and its daughter town, Glastonbury, is a structure which will see increasingly more usage as the various super highways planned for the future are constructed. It is planned that the Putnam Bridge will eventually become the main river crossing linking New York and Boston. Being between the third and fifth miles from a great city, makes it a decidedly desirable location to view the expansive panorama of the famous Connecticut Valley from each family's viewpoint, along its hillsides which meets the average man's increasing personal desire to own a home so near his labors.

The Zoning Commission has carefully arranged its plans so that it will always be a distinctive residential suburb to Metropolitan Hartford.

The Town Plan Commission is decidedly alert for future benefits, having a general plan already laid out whereby property desired to meet their requirement will be acquired as soon as possible to be in readiness for future expansion and development along those lines.

Council meetings are well attended by those interested in the control of that economic feature of living. The Businessmen's, and Civic Association lead in necessary town requirements.

Women associations, the Grange and other societies are active in the aid of creating a better place to live.

No better schools can be found anywhere, the plan adopted early in the 20th century of getting good teachers and keeping them is showing results.

Wethersfield presents advantages difficult to equal anywhere in New England, being purely a town of homes near a large city. Among the natural geographical features of the Town is the Wethersfield Cove, which is a boaters' paradise with launching facilities maintained by the Wethersfield Yacht Club and the Town of Wethersfield.

Social and community spirit is supreme in a village of homes. Cultural, recreational and amusement festivals come in routine throughout the year. Literary clubs, parent-teacher organizations and garden clubs all tend to keep the "Home Beautiful" as observed in "Old Wethersfield". The oldest Volunteer fire department is still in existence with 95 men and eight pieces of modern fire fighting equipment in three stations.

Windsor History

Having been settled on September 26, 1633, by a group of Pilgrims from Plymouth, Massachusetts, Windsor enjoys the proud distinction of being the oldest English settlement in Connecticut. It joins Hartford on the north and was one of the three River Towns, Windsor, Wethersfield, and Hartford, that, in 1639, adopted the Fundamental Orders of Connecticut, the first written constitution adopted by a people to creat a government for themselves anywhere in the world.

The first large migration to Windsor came from Dorchester, Massachusetts. This group established here the First Congregational Church, the oldest church of its denomination in America. One of their number was Roger Ludlow, the first president of the General Court of Connecticut and the ablest jurist in the colony. Other leaders were Matthew Grant and Thomas Dewey, ancestors of General U. S. Grant and Admiral George Dewey.

From those early days to the present, Windsor has been the home of many eminent leaders in public life and business enterprise. Prominent among these have been Oliver Ellsworth, Chief Justice of the Superior Court of the United States; John M. Niles, United States Senator, Post Master General, and founder of the Hartford Times; Edward Roland Sill, poet and essayist; Roger Wolcott, Governor; Christopher Spencer, inventor. Today Windsor's leaders in every field of activity are upholding the best traditions of the past coupled with enthusiastic adoption and promotion of every up-to-date trend of proven worth.

The town established the first hydro-electric generating plant and the first long-distance transmission of electric service in the United States and is still a center for the generation and distribution of electric power. Windsor took the lead in developing the modern methods of cultivating shade-grown tobacco and is now the home of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station and carries on the most highly specialized forms of agriculture, market gardening and floriculture.

The town is noted for its fine old Colonial residences, and its beautiful modern homes. Many fine new residential sections have recently begun development. Parks, playgrounds, and recreation centers add charm to the community and contribute to health and the enjoyment of life. Churches of various denominations offer abundant opportunities for worship and social and religious activities. The schools both public and private rank among the best of their respective types and are the pride of the people.

TOBACCO VALLEY

That part of the Connecticut River Valley which extends northward from Portland, Connecticut, to the New Hampshire-Massachusetts line is called Tobacco Valley because in this fertile area fifty million dollars worth of cigar leaf tobacco is grown annually. All the tobacco grown in Tobacco Valley is used for the wrapper and binder of cigars. These are the two outer layers of the cigar and are the most expensive part of it. No other region in America produces as many cigar wrappers and binders as this relatively small area of New England.

Near the center of Tobacco Valley lies the ancient town of Windsor which has played an important part in the history and development of the great tobacco industry here. In fact, the New England tobacco industry was started in Windsor when the first crop of tobacco grown by the white man was raised here in 1640.

When the smoking of cigars became the fashionable way of using tobacco, at the beginning of the nineteenth century, Windsor was among the first of the river towns to build cigar factories. Probably the most popular of all cigars smoked at that early period was the brand advertised as "Windsor Particulars."

Windsor is also the seat of the only tobacco experiment station in a northern state. This station is maintained by the State of Connecticut and the United States Dept. of Agriculture to aid the tobacco farmers by scientific research. But, many years before the present experiment station was built, experiments were being conducted in Windsor on fertilizers, curing and other phases of tobacco growing. The information gained from these early tests is the basis of our present practices and largely responsible for the preeminence of Tobacco Valley in the cigar leaf industry of America. To carry out these experiments, a group of men organized in Windsor in 1891 a stock company called the Connecticut Valley Tobacco Experiment Co., an organization that is almost unique in the history of agriculture. Stock in this company was sold for $10.00 a share and was oversubscribed even though the buyers knew that no dividends in cash would ever be paid.

The great Shade Tobacco industry was also started in Windsor when this same group of men sponsored the erection of a tent of one-third acre in extent—the little tent that grew into ten thousand acres of tobacco tents in the next three decades. At present Windsor grows more acres of tobacco under shade cloth than any other town, not only in New England, but in the whole world. Rightly then has Windsor been called "The Heart of Tobacco Valley."

The modern Windsor has achieved a balance in its economy between residences, commercial use, industry and agriculture. Nine of the fourteen industrial establishments in Windsor have located here within the past year. Reflecting its fiscal stability, Windsor is one of the few communities in New England that has had a tax rate reduction this year.

Bloomfield History

The New Bloomfield Town Hall, in use since December 1961, embodies both the colonial heritage and the sound progressive tradition that characterize the Town.

The years following World War II brought rapid residential growth to most communities. This residential growth was accompanied by many problems, not the least of which was the need for additional revenue sources to offset the mounting costs of services demanded by new residents. Bloomfield, thanks to the efforts of a splendid Industrial Development Commission, has seen a number of highly desirable industries locate here over the past ten years. However, this is not the first influx of industry to Bloomfield. From earliest days industrial operations have played a big role in the growth and development of the town. Fortunately, the historical inquisitiveness and sincere desire to properly record the past on the part of Mr. Jack Hoover provides us with this interesting historical background on early industrial development.

The assumption that the current influx of industry is altering the character of our town is disputed by the historical record.

Industry has played an important part in the life of the community from the very beginning. In fact, it has had much to do with the creation of the atmosphere so justly considered the chief value of the town.

What the earlier industrial establishments were, who managed them and where they were located, is disclosed in the following brief notes:

1642 The year of first local settlement ventures . . . kilns set up for the manufacture of pitch, tar and turpentine . . . built by John Griffin on brook (since given his name) to rear of Rollin Cowles residence, Tariffville Road . . . in operation several years . . . portion of products used in building ships at Windsor and Hartford . . . greater portion exported.

1680 Ephram Howard built saw mill 60 rods from mouth of Griffin Brook . . . served widespread district for more than 150 years . . . taken over by Enoch Buttles sometime after 1775 . . . best known by his name . . . water wheel 36 feet in diameter . . . old foundation stones visable.

1725 For a full century after 1725 the making of brick gave employment to many . . . Eggleston family started it with large yard south of Cottage Grove Rd. opposite Blue Hills school . . . after 1800 bricks were made on Wintonbury Ave. and Filley St.

1740 Jonathan Bidwell . . . first of family to settle here . . . built town's second saw mill . . . descendants through the fourth generation identified with management . . . stood on south bank of Wash Brook a few feet west of Bloomfield Avenue bridge crossing . . . most of lumber used in southern two-thirds of town for building homes, barns, sleds, carts, wagons, buggies and ox yokes, over stretch of 125 years, milled here . . . although not in operation after 1892 mill house stood until demolished by flood of 1908 . . . part of dam exists.

1760 A cooperage was established on Seneca Rd. . . . Joseph Fitch, Jr. (brother of John Fitch of steamboat fame) was owner . . . employed several helpers . . . besides supplying great local demand for wood tubs and buckets of all sizes . . . exported as many as 1,500 hogsheads, tierces and barrels per year.
In late 1760's Daniel Wilcox began the manufacture of bear traps . . . sold all over Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York state . . . in 1775 started making guns . . . advertised widely for gunsmiths . . . enjoyed thriving business . . . home he built near gun mill in 1770 now residence of Dr. Norris Swett.

1770 William Barton began manufacture of bells and pistols . . . plant stood on present premises of Mrs. E. L. Fowler, Park Avenue . . . here twenty years . . . was first in U. S. to cast sleigh bells in one piece.
During the 85 year period from 1780 to 1865 three generations of Gilletts operated a grist mill . . . site of the J. R. Washbourne residence on Wash Brook . . . for a time they also had saw mill on opposite bank of creek.

1790 Justice Fitch (son of Joseph Fitch, the cooper) started operation of tannery . . . where frame store buildings stand opposite Town Hall parking lot . . . in business thirty years or more . . . lived in house just vacated by Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Gabb.

1795 Joseph Burr was running oil mill at present location of Ludwig Hoffman nursery . . . Samuel Burr (probably a son) took over in 1810 . . . fifty year ago neighborhood children considered old building haunted.

1800 Oliver Filley established famous tinware factory . . . began in old residence near road in front of brick house on LaSalett College property . . . moved in 1809 to new structure erected to the north and rear of Massaco Farm house, Brown St., which Filley had purchaser . . . painted tin household utensils manufactured, japanned and decorated by imported artisans . . . sold mostly by peddlers who covered the country . . . branch factories established in Philadelphia, Lansingburg, N. Y., and St. Louis . . . local plant in operation forty years.

In business over about the same period as the tin factory . . . also on Brown St. . . . was a drum factory . . . a 16 x 32 foot building just north of E. Holcombe residence . . . removed thirty years ago . . . many deep-bodied Brown drums exist . . . those labeled by Benj. Brown or his younger distant relative, Eli Brown, considered museum pieces.

About 1800 Allyn Cadwell started coffin factory . . . building was west of A. P. Jacobsen residence, Wintonbury Avenue.

1811 A carding and fulling mill appeared at north end of Bidwell's Bloomfield Avenue dam . . . was property of Mr. Chauncy Goodrich . . . my this time Bidwells has flourishing cider mill, brandy still, maple sugar house, mechanical corn sheller and small grain fanning machine near saw mill.

1825 By 1825 four first class colonial inns and first of two stage coach lines were serving community . . . stage line had headquarters at inn where Town Hall stands . . . the inn burned in 1887.

1830 Samuel Goodwin was making buggies on premises of E. Ferrarresso, Simsbury Rd. . . . Thos. Gabb arrived from England to set up blacksmith shop near home of Wm. Cooley, Maple Avenue . . . James Prosser started second stage line . . . turned his Simsbury Rd. residence into fifth inn of town . . . this until recently the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Capen.

1835 From about 1835 to 1875 Humphrey brothers conducted large sash and blind factory . . . water powered . . . at pond across from Tumble Brook Club . . . for a time during same years Case & Hamblin had similar large factory at Riley Lumber Co. location . . . powered by steam . . . destroyed by fire.

1843 In 1843 Augustus Whiton built blacksmith shop where Post Office stands . . . in 1845 erected two-story 40 x 100 foot building to the east of shop . . . manufactured buggies and wagons . . . finally specialized in wagons for Adams Express Co. . . . son Tudor took over in 1880 . . . factory closed in 1900 after 55 busy years.

During much of same period A. H. Porter ran wagon factory on Park Street School lot . . . A. E. Brewer had wagon factory on same side of Park midway between School St. and Blue Hills . . . both handled some work sub-let by Whiton.

1860 Since 1860 tobacco packing has been major industry . . . Shaler F. Burnham, Wm. J. Gabb, The Filley Co., and Capen Bros. . . . preceded the advent of such as Starr Bros., of New York, Griffin, Hartfan, American Sumatra, etc. . . . Gabb's first warehouse stood on rear of present Town Hall lot . . . in 1892 he built larger building where Masonic Hall stands . . . burned in 1911 . . . The Filley Co. was on Filley Street . . . Capen Bros. had plant at junction of Cottage Grove and Maple.

1863 In building to rear of Senatro Market at Center, Sidney B. Colton and son Franklin began the manufacture of grain cradles . . . in business for fifteen years.

1869 In 1869 and for some time before and after . . . Jerome Burr had hat factory on Juniper Road . . . building still standing on premises of Fred Bitzer.

1874 Geo. D. Gabb built cigar factory at site of old home of Capt. Byron Allyn on Gabb Road . . . at elder Gabb's death in 1914, T. H. Gabb took charge . . . Claude Loomis, another cigar manufacturer, operated at several locations . . . such factories of that day employed many women.

As Bloomfield continues to grow at an ever increasing rate, the Town Council finds itself confronted with the paradoxical problem of providing more and more services to a rapidly growing community and at the same time attempting to maintain a stable tax rate.

Farmington History

The Tunxis River, (now known as the Farmington River) winding its way through a fertile valley, first attracted settlers from Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield to what is now Farmington. In 1640 some families established the Plantation of Tunxis on the east side of the river. Then in 1645 the settlement was incorporated as the Town of Farmington. Ancient Farmington included Great Swamp (Second Society of Farmington) set off in 1705; Panthorn (Southington) in 1724; New Cambridge (Bristol) in 1744; Nod (Northington or Avon) in 1750.

The first path of the earliest settlers of Farmington went to Hartford through the cut in the mountains and was known as Hartford Path. A road to Simsbury went from the Hartford road after it descended Bird's Hill.

Farmington town votes refer to many early highways. In 1669 three roads were accepted by the town, and in 1684 a committee was appointed to lay out the most convenient highways about the town. Maps show many of these roads in contemporary cartography. According to Low's Almanac of 1783, the main village street was part of the "Western Postroad from Boston to Hartford, Fishkill and Philadelphia."

The Talcott Mountain Turnpike and the Hartford and New Haven Turnpike companies were incorporated in 1798, and both laid out turnpikes through Farmington. In 1801 the Farmington and Bristol Turnpike Company was incorporated to construct a road from Burlington to Hartford, and the part between Hartford and Farmington was a portion of the Hartford and Danbury Turnpike. The Town of Farmington is said to have more milestones than any other town in the state. The first bridge across the Farmington River was built in 1725 and the so-called great bridge was there in 1767.

In 1822 the Farmington Canal Company was chartered and held out prospects for greater prosperity. It was, however, abandoned in 1846 with the coming of the railroad. Evidences of the canal may still be seen.

The town voted money for a school in 1682; three years later it gave money for a man-teacher, and in in 1687 voted for a school house. Other school houses were voted in 1717 and in 1756, and in 1773 there were twelve school districts.

Miss Sarah Porter established her school for girls in 1844 and remained active in its operation until her death in 1900.

The first meeting house was erected before 1672, and was located on Main Street below Hatters Lane. The second meeting house was completed in 1714 and was located near the site of the present building. The third meeting house was dedicated in 1772, and stands on meeting house green.

Farmington developed rapidly in commerce and in population. Before the Revolutionary War, it was the largest town in Hartford County, and the trading center of a considerable area. Shops sold goods from the West and East Indies, and West India vessels were owned in Farmington. Guns and saltpeter were both made there during the Revolutionary War. Weaving was done before 1700 by Joseph Bird and his sons who lived on Bird's Hill, on the Hartford Road. Linen, leather, potash, and hats were made here about 1802.

In 1897 there were in Unionville (or Lovelytown in earlier days) six concerns mainly dependent on the Farmington River for power, and employing in all 600 persons. They were manufacturing bolts, nuts, rules, door springs, table cutlery, nut crackers, nut-picks, bicycle pedals and chains, fine book and writing paper, binders cord, cotton bats, hosiery yarn, and manila and wrapping papers.

The ancient houses of Farmington hold a notable place in early-domestic architecture, and, together with beautiful tree-shaded streets, give Farmington its wide reputation as a village of beautiful homes. The approximately 115 colonial homes in the immediate village area constitute the largest group of pre-revolutionary houses in America. The Farmington Museum (Stanley-Whitman House) is a national landmark.

Glastonbury History

Glastonbury is a lovely old Connecticut town located six miles southeast of Hartford on the low, fertile plain east of the Connecticut River. The main street of Glastonbury Center is lined with charming early colonial homes. Here one also finds the principal public buildings: the post-office, town office-building, bank, and library. Three state highways merge in the center of town, one running from East Hartford to the north, and south to Middletown (Route 17); and two eastward roads, the New London Turnpike (Route 2), and Hebron Avenue (Route 94). In addition, about a mile east of the town center a new super highway to shore points, by-passes the town center.

Having such a convenient direct highway system to Hartford, Glastonbury has become a popular suburban town. With the trend toward suburban living, its population has risen from 5,800 in 1930 to about 17,000 in 1964. In spite of this growth, Glastonbury retains its rural atmosphere with the greater acreage of the township (35,116 acres) scattered with wooded hills, winding roads, and green meadows watered with many streams and ponds. The varied topography ranges from fertile, low-lying areas along the banks of the Connecticut River in the western section to a high spot of 920 feet on John Tom Hill in the northeast section. From that high point there is a lovely panoramic view of Hartford and surrounding areas.

POST OFFICE

Five individual communities, each with its settlement of homes and local stores, lie within the town; Addison, Buckingham, East Glastonbury, South Glastonbury, and the Center. At Addison, on Bell Street hill, there is a ski-tow for public use. In Buckingham, John Tom Hill is a glorious sight in the spring, when fruit orchards are in full color and fragrance. In East Glastonbury there is Eastbury Park, with Angus Pond, a popular spring fed lake with swimming facilities. South Glastonbury has beautiful hiking spots along Roaring Brook in Cotton Hollow and a new public swimming pool donated to the town by the Glastonbury Grange. Scattered throughout the town are granite quarries which at one time in Glastonbury's history were a profitable industry. Granite was widely used in curbstones and buildings, but with the advent of cement, it was outmoded and the quarries abandoned. Their picturesque locations, however, make popular hiking and picnic places.

For those who love the quiet country life within easy reach of a large city, Glastonbury is ideal.

Glastonbury's beginnings as an English colonial settlement are inseparably linked with those of Wethersfield, of which Glastonbury was a part until incorporated as a separate township in 1693. The fertile green meadows, flat and treeless, offered these early settlers of Wethersfield ideal land for raising crops and pasturing live stock. In 1639 the proprietors of Wethersfield divided the land into what is now western Glastonbury. At that time, forty-four men received grants three miles in length, and varying in width from seven to two hundred rods. The reason for the variation, apparently, was to give every land holder an equitable proportion of meadow.

It is not known definitely where or by whom the first house was built in Glastonbury, but Thomas Edwards is said to have built here in 1645 in the north-western section called Naubuc; and in 1650 John Hollister built a house in Nayaug, the Indian name for the southern section of Glastonbury. More settlers built along the meadow hill, and the first highway, now Main Street, was laid out in 1698

JOHN HOLLISTER HOUSE

Soon the early settlers, numbering twenty-four householders by 1691, petitioned for a separate township. The General Court of the State of Connecticut granted the petition, allowing the east side to become a separate town when they "shall have an allowed minister settled among them". Two years later they called their minister, Reverend Timothy Stevens, and held their first town meeting.

Now Glastonbury had become a typical New England settlement. Colonial families were self-sustaining. Their livelihood was primarily agricultural. From the land, directly or indirectly, they obtained their food, shoe leather, timber, wool and flax. Industry was a side line. The miller or saw mill operator was first of all a farmer. However, Glastonbury was not typical in one respect. Settlement did not grow up around a green. Although Glastonbury has had a green from the early years, the strip layout of the land resulted in the owners building homes on their lots which were parallel instead of radiating like the spokes of a wheel from a hub or green.

Glastonbury's best farm land was situated along the river. As this area became populated, succeeding generations moved to the higher lands to the east. Here too, farming was possible, but not so profitable. Consequently, there developed a trend toward other methods of earning a living. Lumbering and saw-milling became an important industry, and then came all manner of manufacturing from gun powder to glass. Three important streams, Salmon, Hubbard and Roaring Brooks, provided plentiful and cheap power for the grist mills, saw mills, forges, cotton, woolen, paper and furniture factories, tanneries, and dozens of other types of manufacturing.

Glastonbury looks back with pride to a shop in Wassuc that turned out Revolutionary War muskets, and a mill in Cotton Hollow that supplied the powder. The great looms at Eagleville (now Addison), the anchor works at Hopewell, the once thriving cotton mills in Cotton Hollow—all are evidences of Glastonbury's early industrial development. Shipyards sprang up at Nayaug and Naubuc; sloops, schooners, brigantines and other vessels regularly slid down the ways. Enormous oaks and pines provided the timbers, forges at Hopewell furnished anchors and iron work, and Glastonbury men built the ships. While many Glastonbury citizens derived a living from shipbuilding, others undertook to sail the Seven Seas, and much wealth flowed into town as a result of whaling and trading with Europe, the Indies and the Far East. Several of our larger colonial homes were built with the earnings of trade and commerce.

With the advent of transportation by railroad throughout other parts of the state, Glastonbury's development was handicapped; and due to the depletion of our forests, shipbuilding and river trade dwindled. Consequently, from 1850 to 1900 Glastonbury ceased to grow in population and number of residences. The town became a semi-rural agricultural community with a few sizeable and important industries.

With the beginning of the 20th century several factors changed the pattern of growth; electric power, the trolley, modern roads and automobiles. Hartford and its thriving factories and insurance business offered jobs for our people. And so today we find Glastonbury with its population a little over 17 thousand, steeped in a quiet but eventful history, retaining its individuality, and its charm as a rural community.

Police Department regulations were adopted in May, 1937, and a force of 19 full time policemen, one policewoman, and 12 supernumeraries are on duty with a radio system through the Hartford Police Department which makes it possible to locate the four police cruisers at any time.

Back in the days when the auxiliary police were devoting their time principally to civil defense exercises, a group of the members conceived the idea of providing a free ambulance service for all Glastonbury residents. Their idea was to provide a service to the citizens of Glastonbury which would be beneficial not only during a national emergency but during "peacetime."

During the time that the Glastonbury Auxiliary Police Ambulance Service has been in operation, many people have been aided and lives saved by the prompt, efficient service that the members have rendered in answering emergency calls. This service is available from 6:00 P.M. to 6:00 A.M. daily. The volunteer ambulance service originally started with eight men, which necessitated two men on duty every fourth night. Now with the present complement of 20 men in the service, two men work every eighth night. The ambulance service is entirely voluntary on the part of the members. Its maintenance and financial support depends entirely on public contributions.

We are proud of this group of men and their unselfish desire to serve the residents of Glastonbury without any compensation other than the satisfaction of helping their fellowman.

Glastonbury has two public libraries. One, the Welles-Turner Library, compares favorably with any library in the state today.

The Story of Rocky Hill

Almost any day now, Rocky Hill's population will top the 7,500 mark. We're growing slowly but consistently and permanently. Many generations of families who have been born and raised here, choose to stay and new-comers, sensing it a fine place to rear their families, have chosen this as the site of their homes. New-comers and old-timers too, don't know why we're so proud of our tiny town, but many others do know, for they have read the books published for the tercentenary of Wethersfield, our mother town, and for the bicentenary of the Congregational Church. Burpee's History of Hartford County; Stiles' Ancient Wethersfield and Dr. Griswold's History of Rocky Hill are all interesting and worth more than a casual glance. Together with Town Records, well kept genealogies and legends gathered from the other townsfolk, they make us aware that we have inherited the job of carrying on the Town's tradition of being a great little American stronghold. There have never been any tremendously wealthy residents, nor have there ever been an undue number of really poor. It has been the accepted style to work for one's living and people's worth has been judged by deeds rather than by possessions.

It must have taken courage for the first white settlers to journey down the Great River to the wilderness to build their homes on the outskirts of civilization. Wethersfield, Connecticut's oldest town, at first included the lands of Newington and Rocky Hill, so our early history is one with that of hers. The oldest house recorded on our lands was Fort Deming, one of five fortified houses in Wethersfield during the French and Indian Wars. It stood at the corner of the present Main and Parsonage Streets where the recently raized barn discloses a foundation of sandstone which is said to be that of the old fort. In that vicinity, gardeners still find signs of those early battles — numerous arrow heads and tomahawks, buried these many years in the fertile soil.

Among the early land grants was that to Gentleman John Robbins by the King of England. This included a large tract of land in the town, including much meadow land and land in the Indian territory across the River. The first land grant by Wethersfield seems to have been to Samuel Boreman in 1649, when he took possession of twenty acres of land in the southeastern part of the township. There is no record that he settled on this land for he remained in Wethersfield. A son Jonathan did settle in Rocky Hill, probably in a home purchased from Ephraim Turner, just north of the North School on the west side of the highway to Middletown. This interesting old house was a landmark until torn down in 1892. Another son of the first Boreman, Nathaniel, settled one and a half mile west of the River, probably when he married in 1670, in the Webster House that still stands on its original site, though the road no longer passes it.

Many of the original houses have been destroyed by fire or raized and of those standing it is impossible to trace the history much more accurately than was done for the tercentenial celebration. Though not the first built in Rocky Hill, there is reason to believe that the salt-box house built by Phillip Goff in 1655, at 15 Main Street, is the oldest original house still standing in town.

GOFF HOUSE

In 1692, Wethersfield voted to distribute land in this area and appointed a committee to report a satisfactory way of handling this business. Accordingly, three roads were laid out one half mile apart, extending from the main road to Middletown to Worthington Bridge. The first of these, one-half mile from the Cromwell (then Middletown) line, was ten rods wide, the present Brook Street; the next, one-half mile north was twenty rods wide, the present West Street; and the next was called the Road to the west district. The Webster house and two nearby cellar holes give evidence that this road which started at Grimes Road went straight out, coming out at the present Elm Street at Rose Hill.

Each Wethersfield resident worth a pound of English money, was given as many rods of land as he was worth in pounds. Competitors drew lots, number one getting his land at the corner of Brook and Main Streets and so on in sequence. An area of a thousand acres west of the Parsonage tract north of the Boreman grant and south to West Street was set aside by Wethersfield as the "Common Lots" for grazing sheep and cattle. This was not divided until 1750.

Earlier settlers lived on the Main road to Middletown or on streets near the River. Pratt Street, named for General Pratt who owned most of the land on its south side, originally ran straight to the River, having been given its present turn when the Railroad was built. Many old colonial houses are still standing on Pratt Street. Main Street originally extended from Wethersfield as far as the Goff house, turned left and skirted under the hill, following the old wood road through the present quarry and coming out at the head of the shipyard on Riverview Road. There is evidence that Indians camped along this road for many arrow heads, moccasin stones and stone axes have been found. No evidences have been found of houses on this first road. In about ten years the main road was changed to the present Main Street and along this many fine houses were erected. Connecticut's oldest native brick house built by John Robbins, Esquire, in 1767, is said to have held the largest number of slaves north of the Mason-Dixon Line in its slaves' quarters, now at 69 Main Street. Over seventy houses erected prior to 1800 are still standing in Rocky Hill, the largest single group of which is at Riley's Corners at the corner of Main and Washington Streets and Riverview Road. The paneling in many of these is unique, due probably to the fact that they were built and owned by ship captains. In 1802 the Middletown turnpike was laid out, following the present course of Main Street except that it cut across on Church Street, Elm Street, so named for the elm trees set out by the Reverend Calvin Chapin, did not continue west from the bend at Grimes Road until much later. The road to the Grist and Saw Mills in Dividend then went east from the present 402 Main Street. The Toll House, still standing at 555 Main Street, collected toll from those using the main road to Middletown. To avoid paying toll, some took one of the roads to the Shun Pike, the present Cromwell Avenue.

By 1750 Rocky Hill had become the chief port on the Great River for foreign vessels, and was the head of river navigation until 1825 when the dredging of the sandbar from the neighborhood of Glastonbury allowed large vessels to go to Hartford. The land from Hog Brook to the present rayon plant was the scene of great activity. In a five acre triangle from the present 51 Riverview Road to the River was the shipyard. A portion of this is still Town property and is listed as a park. Ruins of stone piers on the property at 39 Riverview Road once supported the famous Rope Walk that stretched down to the water front. The old Sail Loft still stands opposite the Ferry Landing, giving no evidence of the busy place it was in the eighteenth century. The ferry had started running between Rocky Hill and South Glastonbury in 1700.

FERRY

There were, on the waterfront, four double store buildings, that like the Sail Loft, were two stories in front and three in the rear. There were three wharves and numerous other buildings used for trade and manufacturing, as well as many dwellings. Many of the latter have been moved to other parts of town. Vessels used to fight the American Revolution were built here and others owned by local merchants were docked here, there being record of as many as nine ships being on the river stocks at one time. A large schooner was built in the road adjoining the house at 52 Elm Street and drawn to the River on specially built wheels by forty yoke of oxen. Smaller boats and pleasure craft were built in Belden's Shipyard until 1892 and the launchings were such gay times that the town declared holidays and those old-timers who share their memories with us, do so with smiles and eye-twinkle.

Ships owned by local merchants carried men and products from this little town to far corners of the globe as well as to other American ports. At the end of the eighteenth century, forty percent of the town's men were engaged in sea-faring service, and tradition tells us that twenty-two were lost in one year while plying their trade with the West Indies and South America. It was then a common sight to see a line of ox or horse drawn carts and wagons extending from the wharves out Elm Street to the old Deacon Dimock place at Grimes Road, awaiting their turn to unload or load produce and wares.

All the diversified industries necessary for foreign commerce were carried on in this community. In the woods, at the end of what now is France Street, are the ruins of the old button factory which used the little stream there for water-power. Dividend was so named because the Bulkley family, who owned the water-power rights in that section, collected their fees in dividends in the mills. The Saw Mill, Grist Mill and foundry where scissors and other hardware were manufactured, made Dividend an important section even though the soil there and extending up to the highway at Drum Hill was too poor even to grow Peppercorns. The name Peppercorns is still used by some for this section. The Name Drum Hill, by the way, is said to have come from the sound made by horses hoofs and by walking over the hill before it was paved. Smithies stood at Washington Street and Glastonbury Avenue and on Parsonage Road near Main Street: A brick yard was west of Main Street across from the "big brick house." There were at least two cooperages nearby, where "pipe staves" were made, put into bundles or shocks and shipped out to be returned as filled hogsheads. Farm products, tanneries, shoe-making, wagon building and metal wares also played a part in this early trade.

One of the town's most prominent business men in the last quarter of the eighteeneth century was Thomas Danforth who, with chain stores and peddlar cars brought his metal wares before the people of New England and New York state and by vessels to those in Savannah and Atlanta. He is said to have made the first pewter in the colonies in the metal shop that stood next to the home he built in 1783, which still stands at the corner of Glastonbury Avenue and Main Street. The shop was moved and is now part of the dwelling at 211 Man Street. From this Danforth metal shop came tin, copper, pewter, brass, lead, britannia and japanned goods.

Cargoes of onions, cattle, swine, bricks, shingles, grain, pipe staves and manufactured articles were shipped out and barrels of sugar, rum, molasses and salt cod fish were brought in. There was probably also a clandestine trade in slaves, for Connecticut at that time gave legal sanction to slavery. In 1790 there were sixteen slaves registered as property in Town and portions of the old slave gallery can still be seen in the Congregational Church. The Griswold house at the southeast corner of Main and Elm Streets was long an "Underground Station" for run-away slaves.

With completion of the Valley Railroad in 1873 the River trade disappeared. At this time there was a real estate boom, during which some forty houses were built. These can be recognized in most cases by their nearly flat roofs. Two plots in streets and avenues, one in the Chapin Avenue section and another south of Pratt Street, east of Dividend Road were laid out before the boom collapsed.

It is a matter of recorded history how the early settlers in 1720, having grown weary of the long trip to church in Wethersfield, petitioned the mother town and the General Assembly to be set off as a separate parish. The petition was granted in 1722, the parish first being named Stepney and later Lexington. Common reference to this section in early records, was as Rockie Hill and so that was the natural choice of a name when it was incorporated as a Town in 1843.

The first church, built about 1722, served the parish for eighty-six years. It was a plain wooden building, unpainted, unplastered and unheated. In 1805 the Parish purchased forty rods of ground and at a cost of $9000 and much contributed labor, erected the present structure of the Congregational Church, dedicating it in 1808. At first the building was unheated, the worshipers using foot-stoves, soap-stones and heated planks to keep warm during the long services. They were called to worship by the beat of a drum until 1830 when a bell and clock were installed. This bell was also used as the "passing bell" until about 1880, six strokes being rung for a male, four for a female; the age being sounded by tens with a pause between each ten.

During the years the slave gallery, old pews, high pulpit and steeple have been removed but the Historic Committee in 1942 deposited a document for permanent reference in the Library of Congress stating that this church possesses exceptional historic and architectural interest worthy of preservation.

In 1830, the Methodists organized a church. For eight years they met in the old Sail Loft over Roderick Grimes' store. In 1849 they bought the old William Bradford store and moved it from the waterfront to the corner of Parsonage and Main Streets, using it for their services until the completion in 1859 of a plain white church at the present site at Main and Church Streets. This was destroyed by fire in 1895 so services were held in Shipman's Hall through the courtesy of the Order of United Mechanics until the present building was completed a year later.

Legend tells us that the early Roman Catholics used to walk to Middletown or Hartford for mass, carrying their shoes until they reached the outskirts of the town, for shoes were scarce and expensive in those days. A room in the old Dowling house on West Street was used as a confessional and services were held in the upper part of the old brick Center School until St. James Church on Chapin Avenue was built by public subscription in 1882. The church had been served by Cromwell pastors until 1946 when it had its first resident priest.

The Town's early schools gave but the merest rudiments of education because the foreign languages, navigation and practical arts were learned as needed first hand. Until 1699 residents of this section paid school rates to Wethersfield, but then procured their own teachers. Classes were held three months each winter in private homes until the first school building was erected in the middle of the road on the north front of the Hotel de Ryer at about the present 97 Main Street. By 1718 this school was outgrown and the Legislature recommended a new building on the same site and another on Coles Hill south of the present cemetery. These were one-roomed, poorly lighted structures. The Coles Hill School was moved in 1729 to Riley's Corners, bringing church, post office and school together near the busy waterfront.

In 1735 a one-roomed frame school was built on the hill west of the present West School on Cromwell Avenue. This was later replaced by a brick school on the geographic center of the state, near the top of the lane that is now a continuation of the west-end of Elm Streets. The present West School was erected in 1914 and 1926.

The Middle School was moved and replaced several times during the next fifty years and at times there were so many pupils that classes had to be held in private homes and in the Meeting House. In 1773 individuals, at their own expense, set up the frame for a larger school house. It was bought and completed by the Parish and used until the present Legion Hall was built to replace it. The upper floor of this brick Center School was one room in which navigation was taught, and here many ship captains and whalers got their technical knowledge. Gutted by fire in 1839, it was rebuilt so its lower floor was again used as a school, but the upper floor was leased and maintained by the Ecclesiastical Society. Here Episcopalians, Catholics and fraternal organizations met; here too in 1866 the Library Association brought its books together for the first time. In 1896, when the school enrollment increased, the books were moved to the bar-room of the Valley Hotel (the house still at Main Street and Grimes Road) until the Association built the present Library Room with funds raised through "fine entertainment." The Library which had been organized in 1794 with a nucleus of eighty-seven books purchased for $89 is the oldest in continuous operation in Connecticut. The first books were equally divided among theological works, history, travel, poetry and fiction and were loaned to the sixty-eight subscribers, only four of whom were women. It became a Public Library in 1926.

By 1849 the school population had increased so much that a brick building still standing was erected at the corner of Main and West Streets and used until the present South School was built in the Peppercorns.

Four rooms of the present Center School were built in 1916 and in 1941 it was enlarged to the present Elementary and Junior High School structure.

JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

House moving has been common in this town. Besides the several moved from the river front to places within the town several have been moved out of town. The Long House that once stood at Glastonbury Avenue and the waterfront was moved to Dover, Massachusetts. Shipman's Tavern, moved from about 159 Main Street to New Jersey, was set up as the wing of a house, since destroyed by fire. The Honiss House was more recently moved from Meadow Street, west of the American Oil Company to Danvers, Massachusetts. The McNamara House was moved from the corner of Silas Deane Highway and Elm Street to Rye, New York

The first burial in the cemetery was the daughter of Abraham and Asa Deming who was born and died on January 31, 1731. Inscriptions on the monuments in the old part show that epidemics, at least one of which was small pox, claimed large numbers of victims. On the green in front of the cemetery our young men were trained as soldiers for the Revolution. At the north end of the green is a pin oak, which has grown from a scion planted by Owen R. Havens when he, as a state legislator, was a member of a committee that studied a Constitutional Amendment. When the state road was laid out to Dividend, plans called for its removal, but Mr. Havens intervened and the layout of the road was changed. Legend says this is a scion of the Charter Oak but this is not possible since that tree was not a pin oak but a white oak. It is interesting to note that, when Rocky Hill was incorporated in 1843, Town records show that the standard wage for Town work was ten cents an hour for a man and the same for a double team. As late as 1880, a one hundred acre farm in town was taxed for only $10 and the taxes collected for the whole Town totaled but $6500.

Rocky Hill was long famous for the gay parties in its many taverns and hotels. Polly Dickerson's Tavern stood near the ferry in 1788, for story tells us that in January of that year twenty-two sleighs assembled there for dinner, crossed the ice to Glastonbury for a mug of flip and returned to the inn kept by Simeon Williams, later Shipman's Tavern, for a six o'clock supper. Dickerson's Tavern was probably later Pomeroy Hotel that stood about on the site of the Railroad Station. Shipman's Tavern, built by Wait Robbins before the Revolution, continued under various managements for more than a century. Under Uncle Sam Shipman it became famous for its shad dinners and Colonel Sam Colt and other Hartford celebrities entertained frequently. Some still living can remember him throwing a one hundred dollar bill on the counter and calling for "treats for the house." The grove on the hill top with its double row of maples and its breathtaking view of the valley drew picnickers from miles around. Its dance hall had a spring floor and saw many a gay party, and its bowling alley shared more dubious honors with that of the Long Tavern which stood at Glastonbury Avenue and the Railroad. It flourished under the management of Mrs. Abigail Grimes Robbins and it was here the Democrats met after each caucus, the guests of General Pratt whose oyster stew treat became legend. Ryers Hotel or Hotel de Ryer was frowned on by some as a rather disreputable place, but is was famous among the men for its game suppers which paid local trappers well. "Aunt Betsy" and "Granny Griswold" also kept inns. The brick house at 69 Main Street was callled the Duke of Cumberland Inn during Revolutionary days extending its hospitality only to traveling Gentlemen and Ladies. Legend tells us that Lafayette and Washington met there one day to discuss plans for battle.

From an old letter in the Robbins genealogy, one of our neighbors quotes these lines for us: "In Rocky Hill, no one was deemed fortunate who did not possess a share of the fertile meadow of the Connecticut, which as you stand on the rocky ridge near the Eastern boundaries of the town, stretch out before you far to the north and east, encircled by the broad flowing river, a view so fair as to be well worth a journey to Rocky Hill to see." In truth, even today one has not really lived in our town unless he has seen those meadows from the hilltop and has walked on them at dawn or dusk or at high noon to see its shadows, to see and hear the flocks of red-winged blackbirds and bob-o-links hovering over their hidden nests before haying, or to see blue herons or white northern egrets standing there singly or in groups, majestically catching their meal of land-locked fish. These same meadows are specially important to our numerous dairy farmers for the hay and fodder corn grown there are of unusual quality.

Rocky Hill is the site of Conn. Veterans Home and Hospital. An average of 988 veterans are on the rolls of the Home and Hospital throughout the year.

Common Sense

About City Directory Circulation

THE true value of advertising circulation is circulation consulted.

TO be exact by actual survey in twenty-four average American cities by actual count each city directory averaged three and one-half consultations for each business day.

TO be conservative we will eliminate the sixty Sundays and Holidays when no tests were made.

FOR every thousand directories sold there will be an average of three and one-half daily consultations for each book for three hundred and five days, therefore—

I AM

I sit in the castles of business and at the hearthstones of many homes, mighty in my power to serve.

Through me is the power to make people talk with intelligence concerning their communities.

With extended hand I guide the wearied traveler, and to others shorten the distances between destinations.

In me abides the essence of democracy, as side by side is found all nationalities, rich and poor alike.

With uncanny certainty I unite long-lost friends and make glad the missing heirs.

Through me are protected the law-abiding by tracing the criminal to his hiding place.

Through me, in the friendliest way, new trade channels are opened.

I am the key that unlocks the gate to what your community is, for all who would pass its portals.

WHOOPS! THERE GO YOUR CREDIT RECORDS! How do you collect from your customers NOW – and how good are their memories? No problem if you have an Accounts Receivable policy with Phoenix of Hartford. It covers your actual loss of receivables plus extra collection costs as result of damage, destruction or "digestion" of records.

SOMETIMES A GOLD WATCH ISN'T ENOUGH. Statistics show that most embezzlers have been with the firm for years. But you CAN insure your company's funds against dishonesty, disappearance or destruction with a "3-D" policy from Phoenix of Hartford.

IT'S TOUGH TO STAY IN BUSINESS after disaster drives you out. But not if you have a Business Interruption policy with Phoenix of Hartford. It helps you meet expenses, payroll, rent, taxes. It will even keep the net profits rolling in.

YOU KNOW WHO PUT THE FIRE OUT, but what policy covers the chapeau? Fire insurance? Extended coverage? The contents policy? Or are you covered at all? There's no confusion when you have a Phoenix of Hartford Merchants' Policy.

Whatever your insurance requirements, your Phoenix of Hartford agent can provide you with the best and most complete coverage available, for your car, boat, home and business. You'll find him in the "Yellow Pages" under INSURANCE.

Is a good thing, isn't it? You would not think of doing business without it.

But it is only seen by those who pass your way.

If you could put a sign where everyone could see it would it interest you?

THE CITY DIRECTORY

Is where people look for you when they want to do business. You should make it easy for them to find you, by putting such information as a buyer wants, in the Directory properly indexed under all headings where he might look for you.
